

Dravet Syndrome Awareness Day Proclamation Guide

Proclamation Objectives

To spread awareness of Dravet syndrome in order to improve healthcare access, research funding, and support services for individuals with Dravet Syndrome and their families.

Types of Proclamations

State-Level Proclamation: Some states may require the request to be submitted as a bill/resolution through the legislature, so you would need a member of the legislature to sponsor it and there may be a very tight timeline for these requests each year. Some states may have a way for you to submit through the Governor's office in addition to or instead of the legislature.

County or City-Level Proclamation: It may be a lot easier to get a proclamation done on a more local level since you are more likely to have a personal connection with those in your community. They are also less likely to have a strict schedule and process to make it happen. It could be as simple as sending an email to your city council representative or mayor (or your county commissioner) to ask.

Proclamation Request Information

Regardless of where or how you are submitting the request, you will need to provide context about Dravet syndrome, its impact, and the importance of raising awareness. You can use the sample request letter template provided by DSF, but be sure to personalize it with information about your child/family.

They may require that you submit draft text for the proclamation, typically including several "Whereas" clauses that outline the purpose and significance of the proclamation. DSF has a sample proclamation template that can be used as a guide, but it will be up to you to review any final proclamation to ensure it is what you were expecting and is accurate.

A few suggestions for your request:

- Be sure to share your personal story
- Make sure to include your full name, address, phone number, and email for correspondence

- Be on the lookout for any responses so that you can provide additional information, if requested
- If there is any Dravet syndrome research taking place in your state universities, let them know about it
- Recognize your state's efforts in prioritizing the needs of individuals with rare diseases, if applicable

Submitting a State-Level Proclamation Request Through the Legislature

Each state has its own procedures and requirements for such requests. Also, the terminology may vary from state to state. Below is a general guide to help you navigate this process.

1. Review Request/Submission Process

- Before you ask anyone or submit a formal request, be sure to check if there are specific guidelines that must be followed for your state. Each state has specific bill drafting guidelines, including deadlines, a detailed list of these deadlines is listed below.
- Ensure you understand and comply with these guidelines to avoid delays or rejections
- If the request must go through the legislature, you will be dependent on the legislative calendar for the year. Many states are only in session for the first few months of each year, then adjourn until the following January. Bill drafting deadlines vary across the 50 U.S. state legislatures, as each state sets its own schedule for legislative sessions and associated deadlines. These deadlines are subject to change and may not be uniformly published. But typically bill drafting deadlines are within a few weeks of the start of a legislative session. A comprehensive list of all states 2025 session information is provided below.

2. Utilize Personal Connections

- If you know someone in the state legislature, your best bet may be to approach them directly to ask for their help. If you don't personally have a connection but know someone who does, ask if they would be willing to introduce you to the legislator or staff member.

3. Contact Your State Representative and/or Senator

- If you don't have any connections, you can call to ask to schedule a meeting with your own representative and/or senator or send the request by email/mail
- If you do not know who your state representative and senator are, many state legislature websites will allow you to search for your representative and senator by providing your home address

4. Contact the Chairperson of the Health Committee in the House and/or Senate

- If your state legislative members are not open to filing the proclamation for you as their constituent, then you can try to get someone (preferably the chairperson) on the Health committees in either the House or Senate to submit on your behalf. DSF can help you identify these individuals, if needed.

Submitting a State-Level Proclamation Request Through the Governor

If the bill drafting deadline for your state has passed for 2025, another option is to approach the Governor's office to have a Proclamation filed. Each state has its own procedures and requirements for such requests. Below is a general guide to help you navigate this process.

1. Review Request/Submission Process

- Visit your state's official government website to find information on requesting proclamations. Look for sections like "Governor's Office," "Constituent Services," or "Proclamations."
- Each state has specific guidelines, including deadlines (often requiring requests several weeks in advance), formatting requirements, and eligibility criteria.
- Ensure you understand and comply with these guidelines to avoid delays or rejections.
- Follow your state's specified method for submission, which may include:
 - Online Forms: Many states offer electronic submission through their official websites.
 - Email: Some states accept requests via email; ensure you send it to the correct department or individual.
 - Mail: If mailing your request, use the official mailing address provided, and consider sending it via certified mail for tracking.

2. Utilize Personal Connections

- If you or someone you know has a connection to someone in the governor's office, don't be afraid to reach out to let them know you are interested in getting a proclamation and see if they can help you through the process.

Governor's Office Information
